

The diagram shows a vertical arrangement of four rectangular components on the left side. Each component is divided into a white left half and a hatched right half. A vertical line runs through the center of these components. On the right side, there are two horizontal components. The top horizontal component is connected to a cable that ends in a hook. The bottom horizontal component is connected to a rectangular block. The middle two vertical components are not connected to anything.

